For a good period of time there has been a grace period during which any good patriot has been preparing themselves for the coming chaos. There are a lot of moving parts going into 2020 and as usual, most people are focusing on one or the other of their most important issues, meaning that patriots are diffused and looking in different directions when they only need to focus on one.

2020 is not just an election, it is a moment of demarcation, between this nation and the next. While I could as easily argue that this nation ceased a long time ago, let's for a moment agree that the remnants of a republic have remained in whatever disfigured condition it may be in. The real question on the ballot is whether America will become a socialist nation, corrupting any remaining institutions of the republic and capitalism, beginning with the electoral college.

The idea of the electoral college is to ensure that smaller, less populous states continue to have a voice in any national election. If a president is to be elected to rule over the entire nation, then every state must have a voice in choosing that office. But, since the electoral college has denied the socialist/communist forces in America, it must be done away with. In other words, what they cannot dominate, they must corrupt to the point of irrelevancy. The destruction of the electoral college would ensure that only the states securely under socialist/communist control will be required to secure the presidency and that every other state will be irrelevant. This is exactly what the founders wanted to prevent.

The Supreme Court is another target of the socialist/communists since it is no longer under liberal control. I would offer that it is still under liberal control in the sense that it has almost from its inception been used to gain political power rather than to uphold the Constitution. The socialist/communist power triangle of media, academia and politics has ensured that even conservative justices recognize that the Constitution is not the last word, they are and they use their power to control society more than liberate it from political despots.

What patriots should be focusing on is making sure that friends and family understand that when they vote Democrat again, they will, in effect be voting for socialist communism. It is not democratic socialism as Bernie Sanders claims. Socialist communism is a means whereby a socialist system retains aspects of capitalism that allows creation of powerful corporations so long as those corporations pursue the socialist communist agenda and are destroyed by regulation if they do not.

Since socialism is a waypoint on the road to communism, the focus is on socialism as a ruse, but allowing Democrats the latitude to call themselves democratic socialists is a mistake. They are socialist communists and for the average

Democrat voter to understand that is at least important, because there is no middle ground. Everything Alexandria Ocasio Cortez says will become their agenda as stupefyingly ignorant as that would be.

The reason all of this political nonsense is important, when the outcome is almost ensured by illegal voters and the corruption of the system is nearly complete enough to get any outcome they want, is because the 2020 election is the demarcation point.

What I mean by that is this last election, as corrupt as it is, is the moment when whatever preparations have been made will be needed no matter which way it goes. Obviously, if the Democrats win and put the final cap on the republic and capitalism, that will require a response. Or, the Republicans will win and the Democrats will literally come apart at the seams.

The Democrats might not even get past their own convention before they reveal to your friends and neighbors how deeply communist they really are, as hard as the media will try to hide that fact or normalize it.

Deep within every patriot is the knowledge that America is gone and there is no way to revive it. Also, there is the hope, the belief that the people they know are not as willing to go down the road of communism that the Democrats believe they are. So they have been too forgiving and tolerant. I suggest that comes to an end in 2020.

A patriot will be willing to act on their own to show their unwillingness to live under a socialist communist system. A lot of people would like me to spell all of this out, but if that is needed, I would be communicating with the wrong people. I believe in America, the republic and the individual. As they say, when freedom is outlawed, every act of freedom is a crime.

You can thank a Republican president and a conservative Supreme Court for that.

It is hard to understand that everything that represents a nation one loved, fought for and believed in is gone, but once one can look at the symbols of the nation and see them for the fraud they are, the lie they represent, action against those who corrupted it is duty.
